Fire Safety & Emergency Response Training Provider: SETS

The Industrial Foundation for Accident Prevention (IFAP) is pleased to announce a new partnership with SETS – Safety and Emergency Training Services. SETS has been operating since 1998 and are a leading provider for safety and emergency training, equipment, and personnel in Australia and overseas with an immaculate reputation. SETS’s strategy focuses on diversification to meet the contemporary needs of evolving workplaces.

“We are extremely happy to have found a partner that aligns with our culture and long-term goals. With this partnership, IFAP will be able to expand the provision of Fire and Safety training courses and continue to reinforce our position in the safety and training sector.” Said Matt Hallinan, IFAP’s Chief Executive Officer.

IFAP will continue to offer the same Fire and Safety training courses in conjunction with our new partner, SETS. The prices and dates for these courses will remain unchanged and operate as usual.

Kevin Broadbent, SETS Chief Executive Officer had the following to say on the new partnership, “SETS welcome the opportunity to partner with IFAP to deliver quality training across the Oil & Gas, Mining and Construction industries. This is a progressive step forward for SETS as we continue to grow in the market space, and aligning ourselves with IFAP who have such a strong reputation in their field will complement the scope of services to our valued clients.”

Matt Hallinan, IFAP’s Chief Executive Officer commented, “We’re very pleased to establish a new partnership with SETS who bring an array of knowledge and expertise to the relationship. SETS have a long-standing history in the industry for providing quality training services. Together with SETS, IFAP will offer one of the industry’s most comprehensive range of training services.”
